Cape Coast

ANCESTORS REBIRTH

After starting our journey to Cape Coast, you will visit the Assin Manso Slave River. This river is where captured slaves from the Northern part of Ghana had their last bath before being transported to the Americas.
After learning about this historic site you will visit one of the highlights of our tours, the home village of our founder Enock.
After enjoying a typical Ghanaian lunch with his family, you will be guided to the cocoa plantation, which is the main source of income for the village population.
Wander around the area and get a taste of typical village life in Ghana far away from busy city life in Accra.

HISTORY:

The history of Cape Coast is intertwined with the harrowing experiences of millions of Africans who were forcibly taken from their homeland and subjected to inhumane conditions during the transatlantic slave trade. These castles and forts stand as poignant reminders of this dark period in history, serving as UNESCO World Heritage Sites and important symbols of remembrance and reconciliation. Beyond its association with the slave trade, Cape Coast has also played a significant role in Ghana's struggle for independence and its subsequent development as a nation.

THINGS TO DO:

After spending a night at Cape Coast we will continue to Kakum National Park to enjoy the view from the Canopy Walkway: over 7 bridges & tree tops at 40m height. Take a picture in the Crocodile sanctuary that crocodiles and turtles inhabit together with a range of birds. In the afternoon you can take a walk along the beach and relax. Enjoy a typical Ghanaian cultural performance in the evening. Continue to Cape Coast Castle, which was used to hold slaves before they were loaded onto ships and sold in the Americas, especially the Caribbean.
Later you will visit Fort Williams, which was built in 1753 by the British. We continue our journey back to Accra.
